New York – August 3, 2017 –Altice USA, the provider of Optimum-branded TV, phone and internet services in the New York metro area, this week hosted a day of science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM) learning with students from CitySquash, a not-for-profit after-school enrichment program that helps motivated and talented young people from economically disadvantaged households fulfill their academic, athletic and personal potential.

The event, which occurred as part of CitySquash's Summer Program on the Fordham University campus in the Bronx, featured more than a dozen Altice USA employee volunteers mentoring program participants about the application of STEM in their careers at Altice USA. The students then worked with their mentors to brainstorm new innovations and technologies that they would like to see come to fruition. The day also included the opportunity for the kids to challenge the Altice USA employees on the squash courts.

Altice USA will also work with CitySquash to raise awareness of its low-cost broadband service, Economy Internet, which is available to eligible households in the Bronx and Brooklyn.

“As a technology-focused company, Altice USA is committed to supporting the next generation of STEM leaders in the local communities we serve,” said Lee Schroeder, SVP of government and community affairs, Altice USA. “We are pleased to partner with CitySquash on this fun and educational summer event, which we hope will inspire many students to consider STEM-related paths in their future.”
